

Using Technology to Improve Work-Life Balance

Practice Management Tools

Find a practice management solution that lets you manage patient records, insurance eligibility, documents, and billing, with tools to save your practice time and money.

Population Health Tools

These tools allow you to aggregate, analyze, and achieve results for your practice as a whole through better patient care, reduced patient costs, and increase practice productivity.

Electronic Health Records

EHRs are now more of a must for efficient practice management than ever before, but they don't have to add to your stress. Look for an EHR system with a high degree of intuitive menus, one click access, and plenty of templates so you don't have to input the same information over and over.

Dictation

The EHR eliminated the need for cumbersome dictation and transcription routines. Dictation technology, like Dragon, makes it fast and easy to complete your charts and move on to the next patient.

Get On the E-Prescription Train

If you are still using a prescription pad and written instruction to provide prescriptions to your patients, you're causing unnecessary stress for yourself. E-prescribing gets your specific instructions directly to the pharmacy or dispensary and lets you get the exact medication to your patients more quickly.

Increase Electronic Communications

Intra-office messaging can be enhanced to allow charts to be instantly accessible and editable to any office user with appropriate access. Interoperability requirements can be met through electronic means instead of having to copy and mail vast quantities of paperwork.

Simplify Your Billing Structure

Let an electronic revenue cycle management service handle the hassle of patient billing for you. Your practice could experience an increase in collections, a higher rate of claims paid on the first submission, and a quicker time to payment with your payers and patients.
